Stroke Order

The 2,000 Most Common Chinese Characters

Ranked by frequency in modern Chinese text · simplified forms

How to read each entry

我

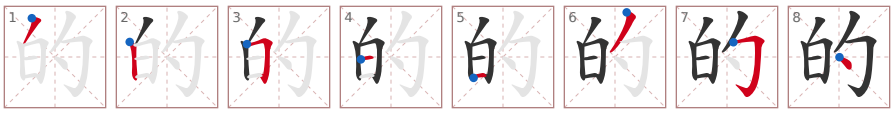

- Each row of boxes shows one new stroke at a time, in the order you write them.
- Red = the stroke to write now. Dark = strokes already written. Light grey = strokes still to come.
- The blue dot marks where the red stroke starts, so you can see its direction.
- The small number in each box is the stroke number. The total stroke count is under each character.
- The dashed guide lines (a 'rice-character' grid) help with proportion and placement.
